

Jordi Brandts, Valeska Groenert, Christina Rott

[„Actually I am different.“ Subjective constructions of ethnic identity in a migration context and new ways in psychological acculturation research]

Hochschule für angewandte
Wissenschaften München

The Impact of Advice on Womens and Mens Selection into Competition.

Jordi Brandts, Valeska Groenert, Christina Rott
von Jordi Brandts, Valeska Groenert, Christina Rott

Abstract [English]

"not only is the automobile the world's number one transportation vehicle, it is also a vital part of modern societies. it is a status symbol representing prosperity, freedom, and progress. the main technical component of the automobile is the more than a century old internal combustion engine which, in order to function, requires fossil fuels. despite this dependency on nature, the toxic gases it produces are responsible for an important part of the pollution to our environment. thus the internal combustion engine is increasingly becoming a problem due to the limitation of the fossil fuels it requires, on the one hand, and to the toxic emissions and subsequent environmental pollution it produces on the other. for the past decade, a multitude of technical innovations has been presented and implemented worldwide in order to optimize or even provide a substitute for the internal combustion engine. it is the purpose of this paper to attempt to analyse this wide variety of innovations in the fields of alternative fuels and new engine types from an interdisciplinary perspective. this analysis is centred around the development of an evaluation matrix. this matrix has two aims, the first of which is to quantify these innovations by using technical, economical and ecological parameters. based on these parameters, the innovations are then compared and evaluated with regard to meeting the statutory objectives."
(author's abstract)

Keywords: Ethnic identity, acculturation orientations, domain specificity

Abstract [Deutsch]

"das automobil ist nicht nur mit abstand der verkehrsträger nummer 1, sondern es ist