

Saqib Ali, Taiseera Al-Balushi, Ali H. Al-Badi

[„Actually I am different.“ Subjective constructions of ethnic identity in a migration context and new ways in psychological acculturation research]

Hochschule Kaiserslautern

Guidelines and deployment of accessibility-aware framework approach.

Saqib Ali, Taiseera Al-Balushi, Ali H. Al-Badi
Saqib Ali, Taiseera Al-Balushi, Ali H. Al-Badi

Abstract [English]

'in the sociology of family a discussion is presently taking place concerning young people's prolonged remain in their family of origin. this phenomenon points to the likelihood of an altered intergenerational relationship and biographical model of youth. however, the empirical status of this discussion is unsatisfactory because so far only qualitative case studies have been published. against this background survival models are computed with the data of the 'shell youth survey 1992' which explain the 'moving out' phenomenon with socio-demographic and life-course related variables. the results of these models display a clear influence of gender (female respondents leave earlier) as well as the educational attainment of the respondents (lower educated leave the house of their parents earlier) and their fathers (lower levels of educational attainment are associated with a later moving out) and the place of residence (inhabitants of bigger cities are more likely to move out early.) with respect to the life-course related variables it can be shown that earlier sexual experiences are associated with an earlier moving out and that the point in time, when the moving out takes place, is synchronized mainly with the establishment of one's own household and not with the professional status-passage.'

(author's abstract)|

Keywords: Ethnic identity, acculturation orientations, domain specificity

Abstract [Deutsch]

'in der familiensoziologie wird momentan eine diskussion um den längeren verbleib von jugendlichen in ihrer herkunftsfamilie geführt. dieses 'nesthockerphänomen' verweist, so die annahme, möglicherweise auf eine veränderte struktur der intergenerationalen familienbeziehungen und ein gewandeltes jugendbiographisches modell. der empirische status dieser diskussion ist jedoch unbefriedigend, da zum gegenwärtigen zeitpunkt lediglich einzelfallstudien auf qualitativer ebene veröffentlicht wurden. vor diesem hintergrund werden in diesem beitrag auf der basis der shell jugendstudie 1992 survivalmodelle berechnet, die den auszugszeitpunkt aus dem elternhaus in abhängigkeit von soziodemografischen und