

Amalia R. Miller, Catherine
Tucker

[„Actually I am different.“ Subjective constructions of ethnic identity in a migration context and new ways in psychological acculturation research]

Friedrich-Schiller-Universität Jena

Privacy Protection and Technology Diffusion: The Case of Electronic Medical Records.

Amalia R. Miller, Catherine Tucker
von Amalia R. Miller, Catherine
Tucker

Abstract [English]

"the growing importance of the green party in france is due to an increase in public awareness of ecological issues, but its history began long before the founding of the green party in 1984. broad social debates on environmental issues, the incorporation of environmental considerations in the most parties' programs, and the strengthening of environmental organizations challenge the green's monopoly on ecological issues. in order to prevent an imminent loss of support, the green movement founded 'europe écologie' in 2009, an electoral alliance for which the green party was forced to abandon many of their party's principles. thanks to the integration of environmental groups, an openness to industry and the private sector, and the weakness of the socialist party, 'europe écologie' was in a position to achieve success in the european and regional elections in 2009 and 2010. however, the potential of this new group will be apparent only after parliamentary elections in 2012." (author's abstract)

Keywords: Ethnic identity, acculturation orientations, domain specificity

Abstract [Deutsch]

"das wachsende gewicht der grünen partei in frankreich ist auf eine sensibilisierung der bevölkerung für themen der politischen ökologie zurückzuführen und hat eine vorgeschichte, die weit vor dem gründungsparteitag der grünen 1984 beginnt. umfassende gesellschaftliche diskurse über umweltthemen, die übernahme umweltpolitischer forderungen in die programme der meisten parteien und das erstarken von umweltverbänden stellen heute das monopol der grünen auf ökologithemen in frage. dem drohenden profilverlust begegnet die grüne bewegung 2009 mit der gründung des wahlbündnisses 'europe écologie', worin sich die grünen zur